APPLICATIONS FOR THE 'GLOBAL CHALLENGES FOR SUSTAINABILITY' MASTER'S IS OPEN

ELTE Budapest Summer University
2-15 August 2021

If you're interested in obtaining expert knowledge in the topic of sustainability, then the 'Global Challenges for Sustainability' master's is for you! This programme offers a transdisciplinary, challenge-based, and flexible educational model combined with a student experience that offers one-of-a-kind mobility opportunities and a truly inclusive environment.

The CHARM-EU master's includes a full intercultural experience:

students will be attending lectures in one of the 5 CHARM-EU partner's universities and connect to the other campuses online over the 18-month duration of the Master's. The course will combine a variety of mobility options: switching campuses from one phase to the other, short mobilities within the phase and virtual mobility.

This course provides a unique opportunity to obtain an accredited master's degree jointly awarded by the five CHARM-EU partners' universities: University of Barcelona, Trinity College Dublin, Utrecht University, Eötvös Loránd University and University of Montpellier.*

Who can apply?

The Master's in Global Challenges for Sustainability is aimed at graduates of any discipline from diverse backgrounds who want to acquire advanced knowledge of sustainability by addressing real and global societal challenges. Students will learn challenge analysis skills and extend their capabilities to address and develop solutions for complex problems.

Applicants will need to hold at least a bachelor's degree or recognised equivalent to a bachelor's degree. An English language certification (C1) is necessary for programme admission.

The deadline for applications is 26 May, 2021!

CENTRAL EUROPE AS A DISTINCT HISTORICAL REGION IN EUROPE: A POLITICAL AND LEGAL INTRODUCTION

ELTE Budapest Summer University
2-15 August 2021

There has been a certain tension between Central European governments and the bodies of the European Union due to various controversial issues in the last ten years. And, the Western public opinion have been using such terms as democratic backlash or the erosion of rule of law when discussing new Central European legal or political developments, while some Central European governments have frequently been claiming about the application of double standards with regard to their countries. This apparent disagreement may be due to the fact that the European Union may look as a homogenous entity from an external point of view, but the existence of internal dividing lines is undeniable, too. A major internal dividing line is certainly the difference between the Western member states and the newly coming Central European ones.

This summer university course is focused on studying certain important features of Central European legal and political cultures that back the division between the Western and the Central European parts of the European Union. Since one dimensional approaches can only have a little scholarly value with respect to such a complex issue, the course will integrate the discussion of historical, political and legal issues in order to provide the students with a complex and interdisciplinary approach. At the end of this course, students will certainly have a better understanding of those legal and political factors that make Central Europe a distinct legal and political entity as compared to other parts of the European Union.

You can find the structure of the course on this link.
